

2nd Week of International Teaching (WIT) - "Sustainability after pandemic world."

From 16 to 20 January 2023, the Hellenic Mediterranean University (HMU) will host in Crete the 2nd Week of International Teaching (WIT) event with the main focus "Sustainability in a post-pandemic world". This event will be held within the project Weeks of International Teaching – Inclusive and Digital (WITEA-ID). It will be organized in a hybrid form, with face-to-face and online participants. The event is for both teachers and students. Students from local universities and selected students from the project's partner universities will be invited to participate in this short scientific cooperation mobility. There will also be an opportunity for other partner institutions from the programme and partner countries to participate either in person or online. The programme for international participants will cover lectures, workshops, and social and cultural events: a campus tour, a welcome dinner and a visit to the museums' Knossos Palace and other cultural activities. Furthermore, the event is meant to enable participants to explore possibilities of international and share best practices with other colleagues.

Last but not least, a PhD and Master students conference will be part of the International Week, where young researchers from WITEA-ID partner universities will have the chance to share their experiences and scientific knowledge in various scientific fields and disciplines.

THE PROGRAM - Please find the program of presentations, round table discussions, and activities of the Hellenic Mediterranean International Week for staff training (some changes are expected to happen).
